

The Ending of Time

Based on the Book, The Ending of Time: Dialogues with J. Krishnamurti and Physicist David Bohm

An Immersion into Human Consciousness, and What it Means to Bring About an End to Psychological Time • for Adults, College and Post-Graduate Students

Saturday, July 18 to Sunday, July 26, 2009

This full-immersive Study-Intensive Program is designed for adults and college students interested in exploring the essential teachings of Krishnamurti, with an emphasis on what it means to cleanse the mind of all psychological content in consciousness, in order to bring about a new clarity of mind.

For Krishnamurti, psychological time is a key factor that is operating at the very root of all conflict, and keeps humanity clinging to reactions and patterns of thought that restrict our ability to change fundamentally and evolve into a new dimension of awareness. The important series of dialogues between J. Krishnamurti and David Bohm, The Ending of Time, challenges us to probe into the possibility of what is necessary in order to end the perceptual limitations imposed on our minds by psychological time.

This Program challenges participants to consider a different dimension of existence beyond the thought-based patterns of the mind. We will examine together the hidden content of our own minds, of our accumulated conditioning and how that conditioning unconsciously shapes our experiences and perceptions of life. The work of this program is to help participants to establish a ground for self-awareness and self-discovery through the in-depth inquiry of the dialogue process.

Each day we enter into two penetrating dialogues together and view a video from the series The Ending of Time. The center is surrounded by many beautiful and easily accessible hiking trails.
