Freedom & Insight

Flowering

NEW BOOK

This new book captures Krishnamurti's depth in eloquent quotes selected by Evelyne Blau and framed in stunning photographs by Michael Mendizza.

"The flowering of meditation is goodness. It is not a virtue to be gathered bit by bit, slowly in the space of time; it is not morality made respectable by society nor is it the sanction of authority. It is the beauty of meditation that gives perfume to its flowering."

978-1-934989-22-7 ~ 140 pp ~ ~~$29.95~~ $19.95 cloth ~ K Publications

The Revolution from Within

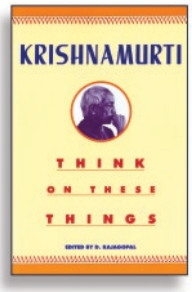
Book comes with Washington DC Talks DVD (insert)

In this series of lectures, given in the U.S. and various cities throughout the world in the 1950s, Krishnamurti confronts the habitual, projection-making mind, which fails to see what is while it absorbs itself in belief and illusion.

Most of our existence is spent in that way—trying to live up to something, trying to bring about a change in our attitude, to change according to the pattern which we have projected as an ideal, as a belief.

978-1-935387-05-3 ~ 320 pp ~ $19.95 paper w/ DVD insert ~ Hohm Press

Think on These Things



Think on These Things has sold more than three million copies (the most popular Krishnamurti book ever published) and has been printed worldwide in 22 languages. According to Krishnamurti, real culture is neither a matter of breeding nor of learning, nor of talent, nor even of genius, but is "the timeless movement to find happiness, God, truth." And, "when this movement is blocked by authority, by tradition, by fear, there is decay."

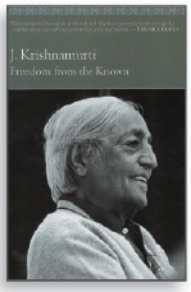
Freedom from the Known



also available on amazonkindle

Drawn from a number of Krishnamurti's talks and dialogues, Freedom from the Known explores many of the central themes of his teaching. Chapters include: Learning About Ourselves, The Pursuit of Pleasure, Justification and Condemnation, and The Dissipation of Energy. The vital need for change and the possibility of it are the essence of what Krishnamurti has to communicate in this book. Education & the Significance of Life

Krishnamurti examines what is true education and what is wrong with modern education, relating it to society at large and the need for a new and different world order. The book speaks of such matters as class size and the function of leadership, while never losing the central vision that "true culture is founded on the educators."

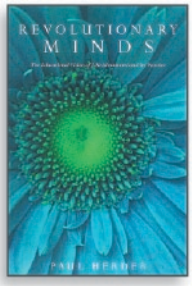
Revolutionary Minds

The Educational Vision of J. Krishnamurti and Its Practice
By Paul Herder



NEW BOOK

In his first book, Paul Herder tackles Krishnamurti's iconoclastic educational philosophy. Education must be the catalyst, Krishnamurti argued, for a new society, but only if the educator is lit by the flame of inquiry. "The right kind of education begins with the educator, who must understand himself and be free of established patterns of thought; for what he is, he imparts." —Krishnamurti, 1953.

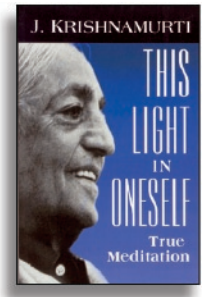
This Light in Oneself: True Meditation



This compilation of previously unpublished material takes as its starting point Krishnamurti's concern for a radical revolution in the brain. Krishnamurti says, "A light to oneself! The very investigation to find out what it means to be a light to oneself is part of meditation."

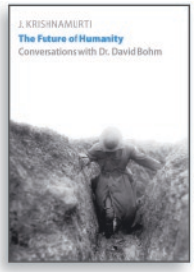
The Future of Humanity



With Dr. David Bohm at Brockwood Park, 1983

2.5 hour DVD

In these two dialogues Krishnamurti and physicist David Bohm explore the prospects for the future of human beings, given our immense capacity for self-destruction. They note that we are still pursuing the age-old patterns of thinking which create humanity's suffering, and discuss the possibility of a change in our conditioning. As there is no psychological evolution and becoming is an illusion, Krishnamurti suggests, change may require a mutation in the very cells of the brain. Exploring this, they touch on consciousness, brain, mind and intelligence.

Attention and Order

Ojai, California 1984

Eight hours in this 3-DVD set

Krishnamurti asks why, after thousands of years, human society is so chaotic, still suffering with poverty, and facing violence in relationships whether personal or social. Although our brains have been trained for generations to approach life by depending on thought to solve problems, we are still unable to do so without creating yet further problems. We have not learned how to be free from fear and do not look for the root of fear. Is there daily action that will not bring about conflict but will lead to order and understanding the sorrow of humanity and going beyond it?
